Portfolio

Despite a rally during the last trading session of the month, October was impacted by geopolitical issues (Italy/ the Khashoggi affair / trade war) and confirmation of an economic slowdown in Europe. The CAC40 index returned -7.2%, the EuroStoxx -6.6% and the Dax -6.5%, posting their worst monthly performances since August 2015.

At the start of the month, the IMF revised its global economic growth outlook downwards from 3.9% to 3.7% for 2019. Our eurozone economic momentum indicator remains very low at 33 (min 0 and max 100). The slight improvement in the Italian unemployment rate was offset by a decline in business confidence in France and Spain.

Mature Growth Business Models proved the most resilient during the month, with support from defensives such as Sanofi and Unilever. In contrast, Rapid Growth BMs corrected heavily, notably Valeo, which lowered its growth guidance, impacted by the introduction of new WLTP approval standards and by the Chinese market, along with SAP, despite the group publishing strong quarterly earnings.

Transition BMs returned ambivalent performances. Nokia posted gains on the month, buoyed by accelerating demand in the 5G market and after the group reiterated its cost-cutting targets, whereas Sopra Steria announced difficulties in its Sopra Banking Software division. Similarly, among Recovery BMs, Telefonica returned +6.2%, while Kering was impacted by fears of a slowdown in China, along with the entire luxury sector.
